Mizuho issues Sustainability Report 2026

Mizuho Financial Group, Inc. (President & Group CEO: Masahiro Kihara) has defined its long-term goal for the future as personal well-being and a sustainable society and economy, and it is advancing its initiatives while viewing sustainability as an integral part of its business strategy. In conjunction with the release of its Integrated Report 2026, Mizuho today also issued its Sustainability Report 2026, which compiles detailed information on Mizuho's basic approach to and strategies for sustainability, specific examples of initiatives, and progress against indicators.

The English version will be available at the end of August 2026.

Through fiscal 2025, Mizuho issued separate reports covering individual topics such as climate change and natural capital, human capital, and human rights. In fiscal 2026, these reports have been consolidated and integrated to make it easier for stakeholders to access the information of greatest interest to them.

In the opening highlights section, the report introduces major initiatives and progress achieved over the past year, presenting key points and new developments in a concise manner. More detailed information on specific initiatives is organized by topic.

Mizuho will continue to mobilize group-wide capabilities and work with various stakeholders to develop solutions to difficult challenges and strive to realize its vision for the future.
